

Words Off the Page: An Evening with Jewish American Poets Coming on December 10

By David, December 3, 2014

Poetry can be a very personal, emotional experience if the words being read ring true and touch the reader at their core. But as everyone knows, if you really want to enjoy poetry in its truest form, you have to see it performed live by poets who are the best at their art and know how to connect with an audience.

On Wednesday, December 10 at the National Museum of American Jewish History, just such an event is taking place. Words Off The Page: An Evening With Jewish American Poets is a poetry reading that will include writers featured in The Bloomsbury Anthology of Contemporary Jewish American Poetry. The evening will include readings from Elizabeth J. Coleman, Lynn Levin, Hila Ratzabi, Jason Schneiderman, and Hal Sirowitz, as well as a discussion moderated by the anthology's co-editor, Deborah Ager.

Tickets will only set you back $10 (or $8 if you're a member of the museum) and are available on the Museum's website. The event begins promptly at 7:00 PM and after the reading there will be a dessert reception with copies of the book for sale and a signing of the included poets.

Poetry live is something that everyone should enjoy at least once. This is a perfect opportunity to do just that and see some of the best at their craft. It's a great way to kick off the holidays and should not be missed.
