National Museum of American Jewish History Announces January and February Programs Held In Conjunction with Upcoming Special Exhibition Beyond Swastika and Jim Crow: Jewish Refugee Scholars at Black Colleges AND MORE!

The Museum kicks off an exciting programs calendar with the upcoming special exhibition opening January 15, Beyond Swastika and Jim Crow: Jewish Refugee Scholars at Black Colleges.

This moving exhibition tells the little-known story of Jewish academics who came to America in the 1930s as refugees and found homes, work, and community at historically black colleges in the segregated South.

The following public programs held in conjunction with this exhibition provide an opportunity to further explore the themes found in the exhibition such as mentorship, leadership, identity, and cross-cultural understanding through music, film, theater, and great conversation. The season begins with our annual MLK FREE Family Day on Monday January 21!

■ MLK Family Day

Monday, January 21 – 10 a.m. – 5 p.m.
FREE and open to the public

On Dr. King's birthday, commemorate the legacy of this American icon by exploring the challenges and blessings of freedom and sharing what freedom means to you.

The Hampton Years – a play reading with Theatre Ariel

Sunday, February 17 – 2 p.m.
$5/Free for Members
Presented with Theatre Ariel

See it before the world premiere!

This powerful new work set in the segregated South explores the development of prominent African American artists John Biggers and Samella Lewis under the tutelage of Austrian Jewish refugee painter and professor, Viktor Lowenfeld, at the Hampton Institute.

Lowenfeld joined the Hampton Institute in Virginia in 1939 as assistant professor of Industrial Arts and studio art teacher. He was later appointed as Chairman of the Art Department and in 1945, he was named curator of the distinguished collection of Black African Art at the Hampton Institute. Burgeoning artist John Biggers, who went on to become an internationally acclaimed painter, sculptor, teacher and philosopher, was his student. As was Samella Lewis, artist, printmaker and educator, with whom Lowenfeld had a contentious, but respectful relationship.

Discussion with playwright Jacqueline E. Lawton to follow.

This play was originally commissioned and developed by Theater J in Washington D.C.

Jacqueline E. Lawton received her MFA in Playwriting from the University of Texas at Austin, where she was a James A. Michener Fellow. She participated in the Kennedy Center’s Playwrights’ Intensive (2002) and World Interplay (2003). She is the author of Anna K; Blood-bound and Tongue-tied; Deep Belly Beautiful; The Devil’s Sweet Water; The Hampton Years; Ira Aldridge: the African Roscius; Lions of Industry, Mothers of Invention; Love Brothers Serenade, Mad Breed, and Our Man Beverly Snow.

Dialogues & Divergences: the Ongoing Evolution of Black-Jewish Relations in America

Wednesday, February 20 – 6:30 p.m.
$8/Free for Members

Presented with the African American Museum in Philadelphia and the Jewish Studies Program at the University of Pennsylvania

Sara Lomax-Reese, President and General Manager of WURD Radio in Philadelphia, moderates a conversation between Cheryl Lynn Greenberg and John L. Jackson, Jr. as they navigate the complexities of historic and contemporary Black-Jewish relations in America.

Dr. Greenberg is the Paul E. Raether Distinguished Professor of History at Trinity College in Hartford, Connecticut, and the award-winning author of numerous articles and books, including “Or Does it Explode?,” To Ask for an Equal Chance, Troubling the Waters: Black-Jewish Relations in the American Century, and the editor of A Circle of Trust: Remembering SNCC.

Dr. Jackson is the Richard Perry University Professor of Communication and Anthropology, Senior Advisor to the Provost on Diversity, and the Associate Dean of Undergraduate Studies at the Annenberg School for Communication at the University of Pennsylvania. His work focuses on ethnography and media, and he is currently doing fieldwork with Black Jews in the US and Israel. He is the author of three books and numerous articles.

This discussion represents the third installment of a new, biannual public forum sponsored jointly by Penn and NMAJH which aims to connect the Jewish experience narrated in the Museum’s core exhibition with larger themes in American history and culture. The series launched earlier this year with Getting Ahead: Immigrants and Business (February 2012), and continued this fall with Religion & Politics: Faith, Democracy, and American Public Life.

Supported by the Arlene and Stanley Ginsburg Family Foundation

Racism, anti-Semitism, corruption, and political oppression are not just problems that plagued our nation in the 1950s—they are issues that Hollywood addressed in some of its best work of the era. These political films, coming in the relatively comfortable period following World War II, had the luxury of once again taking on domestic social problems after the industry spent years focusing on the more immediate threats abroad.

But filmmakers with controversial political viewpoints needed to tread lightly in this time of HUAC, Joseph McCarthy, and the emerging Soviet threat. As a result, much of the era's cinematic activism was aimed at slightly off-center—yet clearly analogous—targets.

This course examines Edward Dmytryk’s noirish Crossfire (1947), Richard Brooks’s gritty Blackboard Jungle (1955), as well as Elia Kazan's On the Waterfront (1954) and A Face in the Crowd (1957), to consider the factors surrounding the translation of individual social consciousness into mainstream entertainment. Gaining a better understanding of these ideas opens up new cultural and historical avenues to the appreciation of cinema from any era.

Instructor: Andrew J. Douglas, Ph.D., Director of Education, BMFI.

Rage is Back (Author event with Adam Mansbach)

The Museum will be closed New Year’s Day.

The National Museum of American Jewish History, located on historic Independence Mall in Philadelphia, brings to life the 350-year history of Jews in America. Tracing the stories of how Jewish immigrants became Jewish Americans, the Museum invites visitors of all heritages to share their own stories and reflect on how their histories and identities shape and are shaped by the American experience. An open door for all, NMAJH honors the past and contributes to a better future by sharing the power of imagination and ideas, culture and community, leadership and service, in ways that turn inspiration into action.
